

One four two.

TIMA

HELEN

When you add those numbers together, you get...well, you know what you get.

Start Here

TIMA

Is this whole trip gonna be about sevens, because that's a little bit on the nose, don't you think?

HELEN

Maybe. We're just beginning. We've got a few more hurdles to jump through while it's still your birthday.

TIMA

You expect me to just buy all this?

HELEN

Do you think I'm making this up?

TIMA

Of course not!

HELEN

Have I ever lied to you?

TIMA

I'm not accusing you of lying to me now. This is just. . . well, it's an awful lot for me to swallow.

HELEN

Why?

TIMA

For one, I'm a medical doctor, a scientist. My job is to objectively evaluate human behavior based on observation and science and medicine. I can't treat disorders based on astrology charts or I Ching coins.

HELEN

Wow. I had no idea.

TIMA

No idea, what?

HELEN

That you were a snob. Baby, I'm glad you got all that education. I'm not trying to undercut you or what you believe. But maybe you forget what you were before you went the med school route.

TIMA

And what was that, grandmother, dear?

HELEN

Don't be a smart ass. What you were was a theatre kid who could quote Hamlet backwards and to a beat.

TIMA

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

HELEN

There you go.
